THE BACCABAT VERDICT.

The verdict in the baccarat case has come, and it is against Sir WILLIAM GOR-DON-CUMMING. In other words, that baronet, lately a distinguished member of English society, is now cast beyond the pale. as a being dishonored-a man practically pronounced guilty of cheating at cards. This is the view of the case as it affects one individual most closely concerned, The verdict means to him social death and a train of consequences more painful than any other that could be imagined to a the front like a two-hundred pound pump- works

The following anecdote about the little fiveyest-old king of Spain will probably interest readers. A sculptor was ordered to make a statue of him. He was busy one day lately singing his royal model, with a view to a pretty pose, when a regimental band wa heard rassing outside. The King, at the sound of the military music, exclaimed, "Tis the Why do you not salu e it?" at the same time rateing his little hand to his brow. The sculptor, celighted, decided upon taking the King in that very attitude. As he was saying so to the Queen, the little King overheard him, and begged warmly that he might be done with ong mustaches and very tall, like a soldier!
